Media Studies is a course which focuses on how media products are produced and their impact. We will be looking at media productions across a wide range of forms and analysing the technical details of their construction, which we then link to representation and audience. There is also a focus on the industries involved in the production, considering not only production but also distribution, marketing and regulation.

As well as an interest in media it is essential that students have strong English skills as much of the work is essay based, although there are also creative elements. This course will appeal to hard working, well organised students.
